

Steve Bowen is a Senior Security Subject Matter Expert with over 35 years of experience in federal and contractor environments, focusing on insider threat, personnel security, and human factors threat management. As the Director for Human Factors Threat Management for Naval Reactors (NA-30), Steve is recognized for his leadership in optimizing security operations, improving compliance, and advising on mission-focused solutions.

He brings particular expertise from his establishment, management, and maturation of the NA-30 local insider threat working group, drawing on his extensive experience in coordinating with various agencies and integrating complex security programs. His insights include lessons learned and best practices from developing implementation frameworks for user activity monitoring and continuous evaluation, improving workforce awareness, and fostering cross-functional collaboration. Steve's contributions to security collaboration are evidenced by his Certificate of Appreciation for contributions to the FBI Counterintelligence Threat Working Group. He holds a Global Counter Insider Threat Professional Certification and is a member of the InfraGard National Members Alliance.

Outside of his significant contributions to national security, Steve, who resides in the Albany, NY area, is married and enjoys ultralight long-distance hiking, camping, photography, and exploring off-the-beaten-path destinations. He also maintains keen interests in sociology and all aspects of cyber.